Caterpillar's Voice

(a traditional story of the Maasai people from East Africa)

One day, Caterpillar hid in Hare's house.
 When Hare came home, he called, "Who's there?"
 "I'm an elephant eater!" said Caterpillar in a big voice.
 Hare was scared. He asked his friends Jackal, Rhino and Elephant to help, but they were all too frightened.
 Then a little frog came along. "I'll help you, Hare," he said. "Who's there?" he shouted.
 Caterpillar yelled, "I'm an elephant eater!"
 Frog shouted, in an even bigger voice, "Good! I eat elephant eaters!"
 "Oh, help!" said Caterpillar and ran away. Hare and Frog saw him and laughed. Why had everyone been so scared of such a tiny animal?

A Read about brown hares.

Brown Hares

Brown hares look a lot like rabbits. They have long ears with black tips. In winter their fur is dark brown but in summer it is a lighter colour.

Brown hares are larger than rabbits and have longer legs. They can run very fast. They like to live in flat, grassy places.

Brown hares eat wild flowers in summer and grass in winter. They also like to eat farmers' crops.

A hare's home is called a form. It is a dip in the ground where the hare hides from animals that hunt it. Baby hares are born in the spring and are called leverets. There are about four leverets in a litter.

The Silver on the Hearth

(a traditional story from Afghanistan)

Once there was a poor farmer who wished for silver on his hearth. One day he found a big pot full of silver coins in a field. He thought, "I wished for silver on my hearth. This money must belong to somebody else."

When the farmer told his wife about the pot of coins, she was angry. She talked to the man next door. "If you get the pot for me I will share the coins with you," she said.

The neighbour found the pot, but when he looked inside it was full of snakes! He thought the farmer's wife had tricked him. That night he threw the snakes down the farmer's chimney. When the farmer got up in the morning he found a big pile of silver coins on his hearth. His wish had come true.

All for a Pansa

(a traditional story from India)

Once there was a rich man who wanted to find out how clever his son Sanjay was. He gave Sanjay a pansa, a tiny coin, and told him to buy just one thing. The thing had to be something to eat, something to drink, something to chew on, something to plant in the garden, and food for the cow.

On the way to market, Sanjay met a girl. She asked him why he looked so worried and he told her. "That's easy," said the girl. "Buy a watermelon. That is something to eat, something to drink, something to chew on, something to plant in the garden, and food for the cow."

So Sanjay bought a watermelon. His father was pleased. "You are very clever," he said. "I'm not clever," said Sanjay. "A girl told me what to do."

Reading

A Read about tigers.

Tigers

Tigers live in Asia. Most tigers live in forests but some live in swamps.

Tigers are the biggest cats in the world. They are very strong. They have long tails to help them balance. They have orange and black stripes. No two tigers have the same markings. Their markings help them to hide in the forest.

Tigers hunt mainly at night. They eat lots of different animals. Tigers are good swimmers. If the weather gets too hot they go in the water to cool down.

Tiger cubs are born blind. They drink their mother's milk for six to eight weeks. They live with their mother for about two years. She teaches them how to hunt.

The Real Princess

Once upon a time, there lived a prince. He wanted to marry a real princess.

One wet, windy night the queen heard a knock on the door. Outside stood a princess who was very, very wet. She said that she was a real princess.

“We will see about that!” thought the queen. The queen made up a bed for the princess to sleep in. On the bed she put three little peas. On top of the peas she put twenty mattresses.

The next morning the queen asked the princess how she had slept. “I slept very badly,” cried the princess. “There was something hard under me. Now I am bruised all over.”

“This is a real princess,” said the queen. “She felt the peas under the twenty mattresses.” So the prince and the real princess got married.

Reading

A Read about chimpanzees.

Chimpanzees

Chimpanzees are sometimes called 'chimps'. Chimps are friendly, playful animals. They have very strong hands and feet for swinging from branch to branch. Chimps love bananas. An adult chimp can eat about forty bananas at one time!

A baby chimp is carried by its mother until five months old. Then it learns how to walk. It stays close to its mother until it is four years old.

Chimps spend a lot of time combing each other's hair. They use their lips, teeth and fingers. In this way they get rid of dust and insects.

When chimps meet they kiss, rub noses or smile to show that they are friends.

The chimp is a clever animal. It can be taught tricks.

Reading

A Read about sheep.

Sheep

Sheep are shy animals. They all eat together and rest together. A group of sheep is called a flock.

Some sheep live on hill farms. The farmer on a hill farm uses a sheepdog to collect the flock of sheep. The flock is moved from place to place.

The mother sheep is called a ewe. The father sheep is called a ram. Baby sheep are called lambs. They are born in the spring. When lambs are about three weeks old they start to play together.

As the weather gets warmer the farmer shears the sheep's wool. Coats, scarves and gloves are made from wool. Wool keeps us warm.

Reading

A Read about the hedgehog.

The Hedgehog

The hedgehog has sharp, brown spines on his back. His legs are very short.

His home is in a hole in a ditch. It is made of leaves, moss and dry grass.

Baby hedgehogs are born in the summer. For the first four weeks their coats are soft.

The hedgehog hunts at night. If a fox or a person comes close to him he rolls himself into a ball. His spines stick out all over him and no one can touch him.

The hedgehog eats snails, slugs and other garden pests. The hedgehog does not store food for the winter. He sleeps on a bed of dry leaves until spring. This is called hibernation.

The Fox and the Goat

Once there was a fox who fell into a well. He tried to get out but he kept falling back down. Soon a rabbit came to drink from the well. The fox asked the rabbit to help him but the rabbit ran away. Soon a sheep came to drink from the well. The fox asked the sheep to help him but the sheep ran away. Soon a goat came to drink from the well. The fox knew the goat would not help him. He knew he would have to try and trick the goat.

“Mr Goat,” said the fox, “the water in the well is lovely! Come on down and I’ll give you some.” The goat was very thirsty and he jumped into the well. The fox jumped onto the goat’s horns and climbed out of the well.

“How will I get out of the well?” cried the goat.

The fox was a kind fox. He put the bucket down into the well. The goat climbed in and the fox pulled up the bucket.

“Thank you, Mr Fox,” said the goat.

Taking a Donkey to Market

(a traditional story from Cambodia)

An old man and his son took their donkey to market. It was a long way. They didn't want the donkey to get thin, so they carried him. On the way they met some villagers. "Look at those stupid people carrying a donkey!" they said. "Why doesn't the old man ride it?"

So the son led the donkey and the old man rode it. Later, they met some girls. "Why do you let that old man boss you around?" they asked the son. "You should ride the donkey, not him." So the old man walked and his son rode. Later, they met a farmer. "What a bad son," said the farmer. "You should let your father ride." So the old man got on the donkey behind his son. Later they met a young boy. "That poor donkey," he said. "He's not strong enough to carry both of you."

So the old man and his son got off and walked behind the donkey. When they got to market everyone laughed at them. "How stupid to walk when you've got a donkey!" they said.

"Whatever we do, someone tells us we are doing the wrong thing," said the old man. "Next time I won't listen to what other people say. I shall make my mind up for myself."
